Foundation Governors in Church schools are those appointed by the Church authorities. Often in Anglican schools the incumbent of the parish will be a member of the governing body, by virtue of his/her office – this is called an ex officio governor. Other foundation governors are mostly active lay people. Some of the foundation governors must be parents of pupils at the school at the time they are nominated, and the Instrument of Government should be clear on who is responsible for ensuring that the nominees are parents. In Aided schools, there will always be a majority of foundation governors – they must outnumber all the other governors together by two. Foundation governors and the Headteacher will secure a formal structure for monitoring and evaluating the schools' effectiveness as a Church school to include all stakeholders.

On this Governing Body, Three Foundation Governors are nominated by the Liverpool Diocesan Board of Education and five Foundation Governors are appointed by the Parochial Council of St. Anne (Stanley)
